

STAY SAFE, WALK

Alcohol is a factor in at least one-third of all pedestrian deaths.

Alcohol-impaired pedestrians are similar to impaired drivers. Both are predominantly male, although intoxicated pedestrians are a little older on average.

Both types of crashes mostly occur at night and in urban areas. Deaths and injuries result among both because alcohol impairs judgment and reaction time.